Extr. for the examination of candidates for admission to the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, the Military Accounts Department and the Imperial Customs Service.

No. F/1151 (E.I.).—In pursuance of this Department Resolution No. F/241/P.E., dated the 24th April 1927, the following revised rules, which are liable to alteration from year to year, are prescribed for the examination of candidates for admission to the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, the Military Accounts Department and the Imperial Customs Service. Special rules applicable to Reserve candidates will be issued later. Reserve candidates shall not compete at the competitive examination to be held under Rule 1 in the year 1928.

1. A competitive examination for admission to the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, the Military
Accounts Department and the Imperial Customs Service shall be held in India at such time as the Governor-General in Council may direct.

2. The maximum number of candidates to be admitted to the examination may, at the discretion of the Governor-General in Council, be limited to such number, not being less than 100, as the Governor-General in Council may decide. If the number of candidates exceeds that limit, the Public Service Commission shall select from among the applicants those who shall be admitted to the examination, having regard to the suitability of the applicants for the service in question.

3. (i) A candidate shall apply to be admitted to the examination before such date, and in such form, as the Governor-General in Council may prescribe.

(ii) If a candidate is employed at the date of his application in Government service he shall make application through the head of his department to the Local Government, or to the Government of India if he is employed in a Department under the control of the Government of India.

(iii) If he is not in such service, he shall apply in the authority of the area in which his parents reside at the time of the application or have previously resided for a period of not less than three years, or in which he has himself resided (otherwise than as a student at a University only) for the like period.

The authority of the area to whom application shall be made shall, if the application is based on residence in a Governor's province, be the Local Government of that province; if it is based on residence in Cochin, the North-West Frontier Provinces, Punjab or Ajmer-Merwara, be the Chief Commissioner concerned, and, if it is based on residence in a State in India, be the Political Officer or Agent through the District.

(iv) No candidate shall make more than one application in any year.

4. A candidate must be a male who is neither: (i) a British subject of Indian descent, who was, and whose father and mother were, born within His Majesty's dominions and allegiance; or (ii) a British subject of Indian descent whose father was at the time of his candidate's birth and still is (or if dead, deceased) and his death is by a British subject or a subject of a State in India, or (iii) a male or a subject of a State in India in respect of whom the Governor-General in Council has made a declaration under section 81-A of the Government of India Act.

5. A candidate must have attained the age of 23 and must not have attained the age of 35 on the last day of August in the year in which the examination is held, provided that a candidate, over the age of 25 and under the age of 35 on that date, may be admitted to the examination (a) if he holds a substantive post under Government and (b) if he is recommended by the head of his department.

6. A candidate must be in good mental and bodily health and free from any physical defect likely to interfere with the efficient discharge of his duties and a candidate who is found, after examination by a Medical Board, not to satisfy these requirements, will not be accepted for admission to the examination.

7. A candidate must satisfy the Governor-General in Council that his character is such as to qualify him for employment in the public service. No candidate who is in the employment of Government will be admitted to the examination unless he is recommended by his department as to his character and conduct to be satisfactory.

8. A candidate must hold a Degree of a University approved by the Governor-General in Council or the Senior Diploma of the Mayo College, Alwar.

9. An exceptional case where the Public Service Commission may, on the recommendation of the Local Government, treat as a qualified candidate, a candidate who though not possessing any of the foregoing qualifications, has passed examinations conducted by other institutions of a standard which, in the opinion of the Commission, justifies his admission to the examination.

No. F (18) (R.I.I.). A competitive examination for admission to these Services will be held at Delhi beginning on Monday, the 2nd December 1929. The rules for the examination are published separately in the Gazette with resolution No. F (18) (R.I.I.) of 24th July 1929. The number of candidates for each Service to be selected at this examination will be announced hereafter.

No candidate will be admitted to the examination from whom the authority mentioned in Rule 8 of the rules has not received on or before the 15th July, 1929, an application on the prescribed form not accepted by the necessary authorities. Copies of the application form may be obtained from the Secretary to the Public Service Commission, Delhi, or from the authority mentioned in Rule 8.

No applicant who has been sent or despatched in the post will be considered unless the person making such an application produces a Post Office Certificate of posting. Candidates who delay their applications until a late date will do so at their own risk.

The number of appointments which will be considered for competition will not represent the total number of vacancies to be filled in Delhi, as certain vacancies will be reserved in accordance with the policy given by the Government of India in the Council of State on the 2nd March, 1929, and will be filled, if necessary, by reservation for the purpose of adjusting regional inequalities which may arise from the results of the competitive examination.

Special rules applicable to Indian candidates will be issued later. Between candidates shall not compete at the competitive examination to be held under Rule 1 in the year 1930.

Salt—Tribute Enquiry Committee's Report—Indian Salt manufacture—consequence of—Imported salt—affected duty on—Tribute—Revenue not to be a revenue in, according.

No. 18.—The Finance Enquiry Committee made certain recommendations regarding the encouragement of the manufacture of salt in India and the desirability and possibility of making India self-sufficient in respect of its salt supply. The recommendations of the Committee were as follows:—(1) that an enquiry should be made as to the extent to which the handicaps on the Indian manufacture in the Customs market can be removed by allowing the existing rate under which salt entered in transit from Madras or Bombay to Calcutta in vessels of less than 1,000 tons and by modifying and making uniform in the provinces of Madras and Bombay the regulations regarding transport in land and the charge of duty for losses on the voyage; (2) that the possibility should be examined of giving lower rates of railway freight for salt loaded in returning coal wagons and storing inland bonded warehouses for salt imported by rail; (3) that every encouragement should be given to the manufacture in the provinces of Madras and Bombay of salt suitable for consumption in Bengal and among the areas adapted to that end should be the planning of such manufacture by Government, the leasing of Government lands to individuals who are prepared to develop such manufacture and the grant of an allowance to the local manufacturer of a sum equal to the cost to which the licensee put by means of Government control; (4) that it is desirable that there should be no self-sufficiency in the matter of salt supply.

in so far as the evidence of merchants dealing in salt admitted of the new rule permitting import of salt under bond by rail. Even if it is admitted for the sake of argument that salt from the Province of Orissa would compete successfully with Andhra salt in Calcutta, if it could be sold 2 annas per maund cheaper than the latter or has been awarded by a body representative of Indian government interests, it would not be refused, or order to secure the salt, even to carry. The Madras salt by and entirely free, even the normal price of the best foreign salt in Calcutta is about 105 annas per maund (including duty) while the cost of producing salt in Andhra is not less than 100 annas of it is 4 to 5 annas per maund (including duty). A reduction by 30 per cent of the present special rate of Andhra 2 pice per maund charged by the Government salt managed from Madras to Calcutta would be necessary even to equalise the normal price of Madras salt and the best foreign salt there; and for the consequent loss in freight charges the Government would have to make allowances to compensate the Railway Company, thus satisfying the salt merchants from general revenue. Far apart from this the Board considers that there are technical objections in any departure from the standard measure and minimum price of salt set forth, in order to facilitate the general sale of salt and give some advantage to particular railways.

4. The third recommendation of the committee is in substance with the actual policy of the Government. They do not object to give every reasonable encouragement to private manufacturers. At present the opening of private licenses is competitive with the Government works at Moserupur has been permitted, and in addition is now placed on the same footing as an Government.

In Madras, the Government have an arranged enterprise undertaken to make pure white salt in Government factories. They have repeatedly been urged to expand this (the entrance at Nagpada and Tondiar) and they have endeavored to produce pure white salt in the Calcutta market. As regards the last part of the recommendation, the only case in which the license is put by means of Government control into the hands of individuals, if it exceeds 20 per cent of the duty (but 3rd April 1915—5 pice per cent). That salt is only produced in a safeguard against the establishment of monopolies in a factory, and as a general rule under the present system Government control costs a manufacturer nothing.

7. First duty and desirability of making India self-supporting.—It remains to examine the last and most important of the Committee's recommendations—its decision whether it is desirable and feasible to make India self-supporting in the matter of salt and if so, in what way any aspect of the question should be referred to the Tariff Board.

Thought of course be extended that India is more or less self-supporting at present than appears at first sight, seeing that if the salt imported into the market of Madras and Burma, about 60 per cent comes from Andhra, imports from which are treated for Customs purposes just like salt imported from Egypt, Europe, &c. If the Customs duty on imported salt were raised sufficiently in respect of salt from all sources other than Andhra and if (which seems to be doubtful), Andhra could not produce salt in sufficient quantities to meet the demand, it would be shut out, and India would become self-supporting without necessarily increasing the selling price of salt. It is however undeniably true that for India to be self-supporting in the matter of salt that Andhra is indispensably part of British India. It seems clear that when the Committee referred to India's being made self-supporting they were thinking of Continental India and Burma.

When they refer to an 'Indian industry,' they are certainly not using the word 'Indian' in a sense that would exclude an industry situated in Andhra. In fact, for the purposes of the policy of 'discriminating protection' that seems to be given to the word 'Indian.'

The next point, then, is India or present dependence on foreign salt?

8. Present position in regard to imports.—Foreign salt is imported into Calcutta and Chittagong and into Baran. That imported into Baran is consumed in Baran. That imported into Calcutta and Chittagong supplies the whole of Bengal and Assam and the southern part of Bihar including Chota Nagpur. Some of it is then re-exported to the United Provinces and Nepal. The normal quantity of foreign salt imported into Bengal annually is about 145 lakhs of maunds of which about 84 lakhs are consumed in Bengal and Assam, about 4 lakhs in Bihar, about 5 lakhs in the U.P., and about 5 lakhs in Nepal. Calcutta also imports about 5 lakhs of maunds of 'bay' (or sea) salt from Madras and Bombay and a negligible quantity of rock salt from Kherwa. The rock salt, of which a small quantity is also imported from Germany, appears to be used by extremely orthodox Hindus owing to its freedom from possible contamination with mineral matter. Some is also given to horses. The Madras and Bombay (crushed) 'black' salt all goes to one district, Mitha. The reason for this local preference for this variety is obscure.

9. Extending the very small quantity of rock salt, about 20 per cent of the salt imported at Calcutta and Chittagong is fine white crushed salt from Liverpool, Andhra, Port Said, Bombay and Spain and 10 per cent is what is described as called "Karkash" from Andhra, Egypt, or Spain. The actual quantities imported in 1912-13 were—

Lakhs of maunds.
White crushed	12795
White uncrushed or 'Karkash'	1135

Normally the price of the best (Liverpool) crushed salt is about 50 per cent higher than that of the worst white imported uncrushed salt (Andhra Karkash) while the price of the 'black uncrushed' Bombay or Bombay salt is about 10 per cent higher than that of the Andhra Karkash.

10. Nature of the problem of "making India self-supporting."—The problem of making continued India self-supporting in the matter of salt supply may be and then to produce salt from that of supplying for India salt the market for crushed white salt in Bengal. Since the amount of crushed white salt consumed is only one-sixth of the amount of crushed white salt consumed, it is clearly the crushed salt that really matters. There seems to be no doubt that at least a considerable majority of the elements who consume the imported salt have a definite preference for crushed salt and consume it if they can get it, and that normally the uncrushed salt is used in cattle.

11. How by which foreign salt could be replaced by Indian salt.—It, therefore, the foreign salt is to be ousted, one of two things must happen; either (a) the price must be raised by the imposition of a differentiated duty to a point where the present consumers will find it too dear and will therefore be prepared to put up with the ordinary Madras and Bombay salt, in spite of its inferiority, on account of its cheapness, or (b) Indian salt of the same, or approximately the same, quality as the imported white crushed salt must be placed on the Calcutta market whether under the shelter of a differential duty or not, at a price that will render it more attractive than the imported salt.

(2) The soil is also excellent, a hard, and impermeable clay, so that suitable methods of manufacture may be adopted without fear of loss of brine by percolation.

(3) The prevailing winds are from the sea so that the salt lying on shore as the drying process is kept free from dust.

(4) The labour supply is abundant though scanty.

(5) As present an excellent quality of salt quite as good as Aden Karabakh is produced. Reporters salt was 100 mostly made by the Indians (salt workers) at Karabakh which apparently defied both, if at all, from "Aden Sea" salt. Its manufacture was discontinued because the Indians were dissatisfied with the extra payment of seven 3 per cent that they received for it. Reporters salt has also been made by a private manufacturer. There seems to be little doubt that with sufficient care, salt of a quality fit to compete with the white washed salt in the Calcutta market can be made at Karabakh.

It. Quantity of salt that India will produce will be sufficient to supply foreign salt. The quantity of salt which could be produced of the white washed salt at Tattoria and of the white washed salt at Karabakh. The quantity of white washed salt at present required is about 14 lakhs of maunds. The output of Tattoria in 1913-14 was 20 lakhs and in 1914-15 it was 25 lakhs. For the present output there is no difficulty in finding a market in Southern India and Ceylon. During 1917-18 the area under cultivation was increased by a special war effort from 225 to 235 acres. The potential output was then estimated at 20 lakhs of maunds. It seems reasonable to expect the increase that any quantity much is excess of that figure is practically nil and therefore no large part of the 14 lakhs of maunds required for Calcutta could be produced at Tattoria. Brine is supplied from pits and not from the sea, and the supply is not independent. The possibility of re-salt-making the brine as it is drawn from the sea has been considered and pronounced impracticable. "In salt-making from the sea as a satisfactory large scale would involve a complete removal of evaporation salt from the sea of production" (Madras Salt Department Administration Report, 1913-14). The labour problem would also have to be faced. At present the salt labour at Tattoria derives his livelihood entirely from salt work. He has a long season and in the few of three months in which manufacture is impossible he has to find other means of support. It is not sufficient since there is always a large demand from the salt and the harbour. Therefore if here to be reported that labour would be very sufficient for many years. The saving of salt is an operation requiring much skill and with facility has its own peculiar methods. It is well known to the Madras Presidency that salt is transported if the sea does not expect to supply equally good salt to another place. An early spring landowner near Madras, for instance, imported Calcutta salt in the hope of improving the quality of his salt but found them accordingly inferior to the new Tattoria salt. Therefore for many years labour at Tattoria would be in excess, prices would consequently rise and the average production per acre of the extended area would fall.

It. As for Karabakh, the existing Government factory at present produces at least lakhs of maunds per annum. There is ample space for now for only about 120 hand families and it would be many years before added salt was forthcoming in sufficient numbers. It is therefore extremely doubtful whether India would be able to meet very substantial increases of the demand within the next twenty years.

It. Cost of producing salt at Aden. It is estimated, in what the Report agrees with, that the cost of salt at Aden is about three pence per pound. In paragraph 10 above, as set out, what price India salt of quality (that would compete with the imported salt) would be placed on? Calcutta market and whether to make it a rule? Accordingly with the imported salt any maintenance of production would be required—does not arise. It may, however, that this discussion of the subject may be complete, the report of it will now be briefly examined.

It. Freight.—The two main factors to be considered are cost of transportation and freight. Of the two, the more important is freight which is always the chief element in the selling price of salt. In regard to the Tattoria it is very disadvantageously placed as compared with ports such as Durgam, Humber, Port Said or Aden where salt is usually carried at very low rates, practically at half rate, from the first two ports by ships that have brought it partly because of new materials or grain from the East and from the latter two by ships that have brought salt from Europe and are going on to India in search of freight for the return journey. It is not surprising that for shipment at low rates offer themselves at Tattoria, where also the methods of working are primitive and need some form of improvement in the near future.

Karabakh is far more favourably situated in this as is other reports. On nearly any sea route reference to Calcutta will make salt be shipped at rates perhaps not exceeding 100s of the freight from Tattoria to Calcutta. The salt works are near the harbour and loading is comparatively easy and cheap.

It. Manufacturing costs. Means of producing salt.—Turning to the question of cost of manufacture, the Central Board of Revenue has no information regarding the cost of production in Calcutta, where salt is obtained by flooding inland wells and pumping out the brine, or in Germany. At Port Said and Aden the methods of manufacture resemble those employed in the salt works in India but the climate is a little more favourable.

Tattoria.—It appears that the average cost of manufacturing the ordinary Tattoria salt is about two annas per maund. Loading on board ship and freight to Calcutta cost about seven annas per maund. It would therefore be placed at the Calcutta market at about nine annas per maund. But, as already mentioned, the ordinary Tattoria salt will not compete with the imported Calcutta salt. The additional cost of manufacturing salt that would compete with the "Aden Karabakh" is estimated at 10 annas per maund, making the price at Calcutta 12 annas per maund. For Aden Karabakh a far stronger price may be taken to be normal circumstances, though, of course, the absence of freight due to the sea and other in round. A heavy differential of about 10 annas per maund would therefore be required in Calcutta to make the Tattoria salt sell in competition with the Aden Karabakh.

It. Karabakh.—At Karabakh it seems probable that a private manufacturer could produce salt of the ordinary quality fit to compete with Aden Karabakh at about 6 pence per maund. Freight to Calcutta is not loading charges and harbour dues at least four pence. The salt could therefore be placed on the Calcutta market at 10 annas per maund and to compete on equal terms with the Aden Karabakh without any protection or assistance whatever, subject to what is said below about a possible reduction in the price of Aden salt. By extending special rates and installing the necessary plant the cost of salt in the Calcutta market would probably be reduced at Karachi at 10 extra cent of some three acres per acre which would bring the price at Calcutta to 14½ annas per maund which only exceeds by a small margin the normal price of Liverpool salt. It could thus hope to compete on equal terms with the foreign salt without protection. If any immediate condition were fulfilled, namely, that the foreign manufacturers could not afford to cut the price. As already stated, however, there is reason to believe that the price of the Aden salt could be substantially lowered and this leads to the conclusion that under present conditions even the Karachi salt would require a considerable degree of assistance or protection to enable it to gain a firm footing in the Calcutta market and still seem to capture it entirely. At the same time, up to a certain point a differential duty while lowering the rate of profit of Aden salt might simply enable a larger quantity of it to be sold in Calcutta replacing other foreign salt. If the producers of other foreign salt are not willing to accept a margin of profit as the Aden industry. This would result not in any way benefit the consumers at the industry in India.

24. Revenue effect of attempt to make India self-sufficient in salt.—The Board has already accepted Mr. Strickland's conclusion that it is impossible, in the case before us, to expand the output of salt in India as to render the country self-sufficient, that is to say, to enable assembled salt from Tatanagar and Karachi and assembled salt from Karachi to equal foreign salt from the Calcutta market. But even assuming a differential duty on foreign salt or by subsidizing Indian salt in any manner, the Board has still to consider whether such a concession would in fact be beneficial, and whether the whole subject is one that should be referred to the Salt Board for investigation. It appears to the Central Board of Revenue that (1) nothing would, as a matter of fact, be gained from the point of view of the consumers of India as a whole, by reducing the salt price in regard to her salt supply, even if that could be done, and (2) that for all other reasons it is inadvisable to refer the matter to the Salt Board for investigation.

25. Advantages of a policy designed to render India independent of sea-borne salt.—It would probably appear that it was necessary or desirable in two grounds:—

(1) as an insurance against a serious shortage of salt and rise in the price in war time such as occurred during the Greek War in which the Turkish Ministry Committee helps;

(2) to encourage an Indian industry, provide employment for labourers and keep money in the country. The Committee is of the opinion that such a policy is disadvantageous to the Indian industry.

The expense from war time—The first of these objects does not appear to the Central Board of Revenue to be attainable. If the salt supply of India as a whole is to be made war proof, it is necessary not only that substantial India and Burma should produce sufficient salt to supply their needs, but also that the source from which the supply is derived shall be so diversified that serious interruption of supply or substantial reduction of output need be feared. The distribution of the salt supply and the price of salt during the war were due far more to the curbing of the salt price than to the difficulty of transporting and marketing materials of the war. The shortage of salt, then, is the shortage of shipping. Salt (and particularly kinds of salt) can only be made in certain localities and much of the salt must always be carried long distances to its markets. Moreover, a shortage of shipping or a partial interruption of communications by sea would render it almost, if not quite, as difficult to ship salt to Calcutta from Karachi (Karapur salt) as from Aden or even Egypt. Hence the dependence of Calcutta on Karachi salt is not a disadvantage of railway traffic. In fact the shortage of interest and existing transport, the distribution of the salt supply, and the rise in price during the war would actually have been exaggerated had India been dependent entirely on Indian salt. The question of salt imported during the years 1913 to 1926 entirely support the view.—

1919	463	1926	516

Even during the worst days of the war the imports of foreign salt were not reduced by a half.

The policy suggested does not therefore appear to be practicable as a form of war insurance. If India was indeed self-sufficient in salt at present, in time of war it might easily become essential to obtain salt from abroad.

26. The economic argument.—The economic argument seems to the Board to be equally unconvincing. If foreign salt is normal import source cheap, good salt from abroad, it would appear to be inadvisable to divert labour and capital from the production of articles of greater value. Except in Tatanagar, Karachi, and the northern salt areas, salt manufacture is a subsidiary but useful occupation carried on by agriculturists, and in times of shortage there has always been great difficulty in inducing labourers to enter the salt pans earlier than usual, or to stay in them when the rains have made agricultural operations possible. In most places where salt can be produced in India, therefore, an extension of salt manufacture would result in the diversion of labour from agriculture, and this not always for this would be an advantage, for in many parts of the country, e.g., in the Tatanagar district of Madras there is already a serious shortage of agricultural labour. At Tatanagar and Karachi, where salt manufacture gives an all the year round, the demand for salt workers is always greater than the supply.

At Karachi there is sometimes a certain amount of unemployment, but, as already stated, there can be no question of placing Karachi salt in large quantities on the Calcutta market.

27. Revenue, seen at the comparatively high price of Rs. 300 per 100 maunds, the total sum kept in the country—by expanding the Calcutta market for white washed salt could not exceed 14 crores, plus to reach of the balance as represented by the freight now paid to non-Indian companies (see addendum) that would only tend to be made if Indian salt were not in its turn transported by the expense of such a large company, and since the value of so much of the imports from Aden is already in the hands of Indian merchants. It is doubtful whether the net figure so reached would exceed some 10 crores of rupees. The beneficiaries would be the relatively small class of salt dealers and manufacturers, and their employees. So much of the cost of sea coast as represented profit would be pocketed by them, and for their benefit every measure of encouragement would be laid under contribution. There does not seem to be any justification from the point of view of the interests of the country as a whole for raising the price of the quality of salt consumed far over a proportion by many millions of people to such a height as to labor them from sea to sea, and compel them to large distances to get an inferior, or to them distasteful, article (the Indian supplies of salt do not work) for their subsistence, see paragraphs 14 and 15 above) in order to benefit a particular class of manufacturers and middlemen unaccountably insignificant as compared with the commerce thus affected.

28. As seen by a reference to the F. Com. Report.—The General Board of Revenue has therefore agreed without hesitation as the conclusion that there is no case for a reference to the F. Com. Board. It has been shown above that it is actually not desirable, whether on economic grounds or as a safeguard against a salt famine in any form, to shut out foreign salt from India. It has also been shown that it is actually that India could produce the amount of salt of the proper quality required to replace the foreign salt. This is true, it is not probable that in course of time "to quote paragraph 14 of the Report of the Fiscal Commission—"the whole needs of the country would be supplied by the same quantities." Nor, having regard to the circumstances that border the important salt—which have been explained at length elsewhere—it is said that there is any probability that even after a long period of protection or assistance the Indian salt industry would be able to compete with the imports with such protection or assistance withdrawn. One of the conclusions laid down by the Fiscal Commission in paragraph 47 of their Report, and accepted by the Indian legislature, as justifying the extension of protection to an industry, is therefore lacking. If protection were extended to the salt industry there is a real danger that manufacturers enterprises would spring up which would either as soon as shelter was withdrawn and whose mutual interests would be an embarrassment to the Government and the legislature. Nor, again, can it be said that the salt industry (as at all events the production of the whole crushed salt) is a home industry as defined in paragraph 103 of the Report of the Fiscal Commission, that is, an industry "of which the products are utilized as raw products by numerous other industries in India." There is not even a grain of salt sent there such as would justify a reference to the F. Com. Board. Such a reference would moreover be premature since it would relate to a nascent industry. Salt of a quality corresponding to the best of the imported salt is not, as a matter of fact, manufactured in India on a commercial scale. The Fiscal Commission in paragraph 103 of their Report emphatically deprecated reference to the F. Com. Board in regard to "industries that have not yet come into existence," or that had not yet begun to produce, or even were only "producing a very small proportion of the needs of the country."

29. From the Revenue to Bengal.—It remains to consider the special case of Burma. Burma resembles Bengal in three respects:—

(a) The people have for some generations been accustomed to a pure white crushed salt and will not as large grained salt such as is usually produced in other parts of India. Substituted for consumption in Burma must therefore either be manufactured by artificial heat or be absolutely pure white salt capable of being crushed on a large scale. It is therefore certain that a differential duty as levied on salt at Bangalore would not benefit either the Madras or the Bombay manufacturers.

(b) In Burmah and Calcutta exports of gaud salt merchandise are more bulky than imports. Outward freight from Burmah and Egypt are therefore low and well calculated to be low.

(c) Bengal's complete and Burma's partial dependence on foreign supplies lay both provinces open to the danger of short supplies and high prices in the event of an interruption of sea communication.

30. Points of difference from Bengal.—On the other hand Burma differs from Bengal in the following respects:—

(a) While Bengal cannot produce pure white salt at all or except at a monstrous price, Burma, with her supplies of comparatively cheap fuel, could successfully melt her whole country of pure white where there are no pits. During the latter years of the war Burma did actually produce over 40 per cent of her consumption. There has been a similar decline in local production since 1920-21.

(b) In Bengal imports are so large (about 140 lakhs of mounds on the average) and the trade is so many hands that competition is unlikely to be able to keep prices up for long and the Bengalis usually obtain the foreign salt at low rates. In Burmah the average imports are only about 22 lakhs of mounds and are in the hands of a few firms, each of which specializes in a particular kind of salt. Competition is therefore possible and does in fact occasionally take place as shown by the fact that there is a general rise in the price of foreign salt when there is no Burmah salt on the market.

(c) While about 40 per cent of Calcutta's imports come from Aden, Burmah depends on Aden for only 10 per cent of her requirements. The possibility that Aden so far as Burmah is concerned, that a differential duty would only cause the Aden industry to expand at the cost of other foreign sources, does not arise in Burma.

31. Burma salt industry.—The production of the Burmah salt industry will now be briefly reviewed. The manufacturers in Upper Burma in what are known as the "Cargill District" were in of no importance. Their salt is produced by boiling in small vessels brine obtained from wells or from salt earth. The process is costly and the total output small—about 40,000 mounds annually. The salt was manufactured in a manner likely to supply more than a purely local demand. It was not termed the "Burmah Salt" even along the coast, but is lifted from chambers or cranes. Manufacture is carried on as far as possible by solar evaporation. Artificial heat is employed only in the final stages. Therefore the system of manufacture is inefficient and should produce a pure fine salt. About 6 lakhs of mounds of salt are produced annually. The factories very greatly in size and the cost of production, which is, of course, lower per unit in the larger works may be put at 6 annas per mound on the average. In a large factory this should be reduced to about 5 annas per mound. The average cost of transport in Burmah is reported to be about 4½ annas per mound. Adding 14 annas for bullock, this salt can be placed on the Burmah market at about 14 annas per mound which should be reduced to about 12 annas by large scale production.

32. Exports of salt into Burma.—The various and approximate quantities of foreign salt imported into Burmah and the price of each in actual times are as follows:—

		Year of import.	Price per mound including duty.
European	..	1925	2 7 6
German	..	493	1 8 0
Russian	..	558	0 54 3
India	..	200	0 14 45
European—Port Said	..	725	0 13 6
Aden	..	340	0 14 6

The demand for the very superior European and German salt would not, it is believed, be affected by a differential duty of reasonable proportions. These variation are in special request, particularly for the preparation of a favourable kind of salt-fish called Sigat.

34. Feasibility of exporting part of the surplus.—If these surpluses be left out of consideration there remains an annual surplus of 48 lakhs of rupees that could probably be captured and retained permanently for the local industry by a moderate degree of assessment, valued for a sufficient time to enable the surplus to be increased and the price reduced, if at the same time every effort were also made to develop transport facilities, to cheapen the fuel supply (which could be done if special forest areas were set apart for the purpose), and to improve the methods of manufacturing in order to prevent the formation of dangerous chemicals, which makes the salt damp and causes extensive waste. Such an improvement, as it is hoped, be obtained under the supervision of the separate Salt Department that the Government propose to inaugurate in Burma under the control of the Central Board of Revenue. Improvements in the marketing arrangements are also desirable, the best harvest within reasonable security sold as foreign salt and in this way the export quality of the best Burmese salt is reached which helps to enhance the unfavourable opinion generally held of the local product.

For the above reasons, Mr. Bowley recommended a reference to the Tariff Board, confined to Burmese salt alone.

35. Objections to a differential duty in Burma.—If the result of such a reference to the Tariff Board were a recommendation by that body that Burma salt should be protected by the imposition of a differential duty on imported salt, such a differential duty would either have to form part of the general Indian customs tariff or be purely local in its nature. The entire Indian, upon examination in the Burmese markets, would be the former proposition would, as has been shown in the earlier paragraphs of this report, not be justified, as its own merits and the burden upon the consumers in those countries would be set at all proportions to the benefit resulting to the Burmese industry. As for the second proposition, the Central Board of Revenue doubts whether the Government will be prepared to contemplate it. It appears to the Board to be a situation that all parts of British India must be treated as one unit for tariff purposes. There is no intention in the existing tariff of goods being liable to different duties when imported by one into different parts of British India. For these reasons the Board cannot support the proposal that a reference should be made to the Tariff Board, relating solely to Burma.
